Three years ago, we made plans turn out our dirt parking lot into a green space for our sisters to enjoy. Well, here we are, 3 years later, with a small park hosting a myriad of colorful perennials, annuals and flowering bushes, a walkway adorned by red maple trees, benches, gliders and a large gazebo where the sisters can sit and enjoy the beauty of Nature, listen to the buzz of honey bees, admire the Monarch butterflies, the hummingbirds, cardinals, and smile at the antics of the wild rabbits that come to visit.

In back of the staff parking lot there was quite a large field; we didn’t have to listen too carefully to hear it beckoning to us to do something there, too. And that is our newest project., in the spring of 2020, we were able to get a professional bee keeper to put a hive in the SW corner. (He will soon be adding a second one as the first one was so productive. To keep our bees busy and well fed, and supplying us with their golden nectar, (in our case...Holy Honey), we planted a band of wild meadow flowers along the South and West sides of the field and the plan is to keep adding more bands of flowers until most of the field is a joyous symphony of color singing praise to our Creator.

The sisters suggested that fruit trees would also be nice to have, so we now have 2 each of pear, peach and apple. Our goal is to plant 6 more in the next two years so as to have a little orchard.

While clearing out the brush along the field, there opened up a clearing among the trees and shrubs forming a little grotto...what a wonderful place for a bench and a statue! We were able to bring the statue of St. Anthony which was on the front lawn in Pittsfield. A perfect fit for our new “Secret Garden” among irises, lilies daisies, goldenrods and a host of other plants.

The small area between the hall and the Manor building is also undergoing a makeover. The large gas tank will be surrounded by a host of flowers. This year, thanks to the Early Childhood Center, we also planted a large red rose bush in front of the Virgin.

As you see, we have been busy taking care of all our pollinator friends, while making our surroundings productive as well as beautiful. If we are able to be good stewards of the land God has entrusted to us, it is due in large part to your continued generosity. To you, our dear friends, a heart felt thank you from the Sisters, as well as from the bees, butterflies, birds, woodland creatures that have taken up residence among us, and bring so much joy and peace to everyone.
I first arrived in Haiti in October 1978 and I left the country for the last time on February 13, 2020. For more than 40 years, Haiti very simply had been “home”; I would return to the U.S. at first every three years, then every other year and finally as I grew increasingly “Senior”, I would travel each year. I was grateful for the restful pauses, but just as eager to return home at the end of the designated visit. Recently, all this has changed; medical issues brought me to the U.S. permanently, and for the past twelve months or so, I have been re-organizing my life in my new/old “home”, here at the Manor in Manchester where I first entered Holy Cross in 1959.

Many have asked me, as I even ask myself, just what is it about Haiti, this beautiful struggling little country that has held me, and so many of our sisters here for so long? For many who have never experienced it, Haiti remains a poor struggling and suffering little country, subject to so many human, political and natural disasters, and this is true. But there is more, so much more. Haiti remains an unbelievably beautiful country. Shortly before leaving, I was traveling by bus, crossing the country on a road I had never experienced. I stared out in delight at the valley below the clouds, that were themselves below me! And the road continued, a little river here, the bus hugging a mountain there, following the coast of rocky and sandy beaches, hibiscus growing wild along the road, and the ever present people walking alone or with companions or animals. Haiti has its bare hills, its crowded city slums, but that does not define it.

The greatest treasure of the country are its courageous people who get knocked down from without and from within but always find the courage to try one more time.

The country and its people are beautiful, strong, resilient and faithfilled. And we, as Sisters of Holy Cross, are called to remember this and to work with this reality. We have been here for more than sixty-five years. At first we were strangers, now we are not. We are sisters with so many of the young women who soon joined us and built up a community of which all of Holy Cross is pleased and proud.

While in residence at the Postulate, we happily remarked that here were young postulants in their 20’s sharing life with middle-aged members of the team, up to several of us in the 70’s and at the same time, a lovely blend of Haitians, Africans, Canadians and Americans. We were a jolly mixture of what the Congregation is all about and, most of all, we were truly sisters who cared for each other and worked together in a community of faith in God, doing God’s work in this world. Do I really miss this family? Yes, I do. I enjoyed giving courses of subjects I loved and sessions of arts and crafts which always delighted me.

In Haiti, our most important ministry remains education, something we continue to encourage and in which we take pride. Our schools are good schools that aim to guarantee a fine education even to the very poor. We are mostly in the northern “department” of the country in the Diocese of Cap Haitien. The reason being that at the time, the bishop of the diocese was a Holy Cross priest and he naturally sought out Holy Cross priests, brothers and sisters for his diocese. Early on, we also established a residence in the capital, Port-au-Prince, quite necessary to accommodate religious arriving in the country at its only airport.
Our largest institution is in Cap Haitien, “College Regina Assumpta”, which educates young women from kindergarten all the way up to college degrees. There is also in Cap Haitien, a college for young men directed by the Fathers of Holy Cross and not surprising, there is a happy cooperation between the two schools. Closely connected with the educational ministry is our little orphanage just outside of Cap Haitien, founded by our own Sr. Claire Daneau that so many of you know or have heard about. It continues to be a wonderful ministry for approximately fifty children.

Not far from Cap Haitien, in Milot and Thibeau, are two more of our schools and, in Thibeau, there is also a dispensary. This is another mission I loved so much, where I worked with a very dear friend, Sr. Monique Meloche, where we installed the first solar electrical system of our congregation with help from Benedictine monks from Port au Prince. And, yes, I did climb on the roof myself to connect the solar panels. Those were very happy years.

Among all our schools, there is one very dear to me which is in Pilate where we also direct a small but very efficient rural hospital here in the northern hills of the country. The hospital was founded early after the sisters’ arrival by two wonderful women who are now in our infirmary in St. Laurent. I am especially fond of this little town as I spent a total of 27 years working at the hospital for five of those years and at the school for twenty-two years. Temperatures here are the coolest and so, for many of us, the most climate comfortable of our missions as it’s nestled in the mountains of a lush, green coffee country. Yes, we do grow wonderful Arabica coffee on our piece of land, harvesting and roasting it ourselves.

Whether our official ministry is in education or in health, many of the sisters are also implicated in pastoral work, either full or part time. We work closely with the parishes where we minister and our young sisters are very involved in vocational ministry, even in parishes where we are not officially involved.

We are proud of our young sisters and of those of the past who were among the first to enter Holy Cross. I know I do not have to mention several of those early Haitian young sisters and how proud we are of them today. I look at the young ones coming along and already I see the future of the Congregation in their hands as well as in those of our other new members from elsewhere and everywhere: Haiti, Africa, Asia...

We are not dying we are diversifying and growing!

Mass is celebrated on the 26th of each month for you, our benefactors.
